

ABSTRACT

Systems and methods are provided that can be utilized to estimate power associated with a circuit design. The estimated power is determined by evaluating a functional relationship of estimated power based on calculated transistor gate area.

5 One or more power coefficients can be employed with transistor gate area calculations of a circuit design to compute relative power estimates of one or more circuit design sizing instances.